"When the Russian ships entered Tsu Shima Strait on Saturday the whole sea was obscured by a dense fog. When the fog lifted the Russians found themselves in the immediate vicinity of the Japanese fleet. The Russians hastily prepared for action, but the Japanese got in their fire ahead of them and, keeping out of range of the Russian guns as much as possible, threw the several of the vessels. to-night publishes the following St. Petersburg cable:

"Gen. Linjevitch wired the Czar to-day that the news of Rojestvensky's defeat has spread throughout the army in Manchuria and that the troops are in open revolt. He points out that under such conditions the continuation of the war is impossible. This is the crowning disaster in the series of calamities that have over- port taken Russia since the opening of the war, Feb. 8, 1904.

"Russia is left senseless. Crowds of illiterate Muzhiks surround those who are able to read the news bulletins in the streets and weep while they listen to the pitiful details of the Tsu Shima catastrophe. The wors predictions of the enemies of the Czardom are now found to be exceeded.

"On all sides the cry is heard that the present régime is responsible and that it must be cleared out. The Czar is no longer considered. Even M. CZAR HOLDS A CONFERENCE. Summons Highest Advisers to Discuss Outlook-Press Demands Popular Assembly.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. ST. PETERSBURG, May 31 .- Since the relaxation of the censorship permitted the public to learn the details of the naval anywhere beyond the angry question: "What will Russia's war makers do now?"

That is being decided at Tsarskoe-Selo. where the Czar to-day presided over a gathering of which Admiral Alexieff was a significant member. The Grand Duke Vladimir, who had intended to go to Berlin, remained to participate in the proceedings of the conference. The Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch has gone to Berlin in his stead to be present at the marriage of the German Crown Prince.

Count Lamsdorff, the Foreign Minister; M. Boulyguine, the Minister of the Interior; the Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch and other high advisers were included in the conference

The presence of Mr. Boulyguine is taken to mean that the Czar will express himself in a ukase relating to Mr. Boulyguine's commission, whose labors are announced to-day to have been completed, approving its form of recommendations for a preliminary congress of representatives of the zemstvos and marshals of the nobility. It is expected that the Czar will appeal to them for advice as to how the fatherland can sustain its honor under the heavy blows

The idea that Japan is concerned in Russia's internal affairs and will assist her to make peace more easily is widely held. The best informed circles do not expect that the Czar will open negotiations with Japan, but think it likelier that he will let things drift until Gen. Linievitch is de-

The Slove declares that the autocratic régime brought Russia, with bandaged eyes, to an abyss, in which both the people and the national honor were in danger of perishing. The war caused the bandage to drop from the nation's eyes. The abyss is now visible and the nation cries "enough!" THE CRY FOR PEACE.

Germany Alone of the European Governments Hasn't Joined in It.

Special Cable Desputch to THE SUN. LONDON. May 31.-All Europe. official Germany, is crying insistently for peace, but no response is yet heard from St. Petersburg, whence only peace can come.

Diplomatic circles are just as ignorant as the general public of what Russia will do in face of her complete martial impotence. All the St. Petersburg advices give no indication of any change in the influence of effect that the Czar will never initiate peace negotiations seems to suggest that he would almost welcome strong pressure either from within the empire or from concerted action by the Powers, to which he could appear to yield for altruistic reasons. His weakness at the present moment takes the form of obstinacy, which he himself regards as a manifestation of high courage.

This manifestation of his puny character is arousing in France national exasperation which threatens disaster to the Dual Alliance unless some evidence of statesmanship is soon shown in the Russian policy. This defeat there has been no demonstration feeling, which is chiefly based on the immense financial interests which Frenchmen have in the Russian fortunes, is complicated by fears that Germany will soon make a fresh move to take advantage of Russia's

> This apprehension is shared in Downing Street, and it is regarded as significant that Germany practically dissociates herself from any peace movement among the

VIEW OF RUSSIA'S ALLY.

Paris, May 31.-Foreign Minister Delcases discussing the Russian-Japanese situation to-day, said: "I see nothing that should seriously prevent a peace being arranged which will be immediate, lasting and honorable for both nations, as well as for the whole of Europe."

The Echo de Paris says there is a persistent rumor in Ministerial circles of in tervention in the war at an early date. The question of the friendly intervention of Great Britain and France, with Japan and Russia respectively, may soon be the sub-

NEUTRAL NATIONS HESITATE.

THIS NOT THE TIME TO OFFER RUSSIA MEDIATION.

Fear That in the Bitterness of Defeat She Would Decide to Struggle On -Diplomats Think United States Should

Take the Lead When Opportunity Comes WASHINGTON, MAY 31.-From what was learned in ciplomatic circles today it is evident that the neutral Powers are agreed that it would be the height of folly for any or all of them to uggest to Russia, at this moment of national gloom and resentment, that now is the time for the St. Petersburg Government to make terms with Japan.

To do this, it was declared, would be to excite and anger the Russian authorities of all factions to such an extent as probably to cause a postponement the peace negotiations, which in other circumstances would probably be initiated at an early day. Any nation which would suggest to Russia before the shock of the great defeat administered to its Baltic fleet by Admiral Togo has passed away that he should make overtures to Japan for a conclusion of hostilities would, it was said, incur the bitter feeling of Russia and in all probability would receive response which would be little short of insulting and might result in further international trouble. Such, it was asserted was the situation confronting the neutral Powers, which are all anxious to bring about a neace arrangement between the two bel-

JAPAN'S NEW ATTITUDE.

Within the past twenty-four hours it has become known in official quarters here that Japan, in spite of the fact that she has all along been anxious to arrange terms with Russia, would hesitate and perhaps decline to enter into peace negotiations with her enemy at this time. for the reason that she believes the Russian Government is so disorganized, impotent and divided that it would be impossible for that Government to furnish satisfactory assurances that the provisions of the peace treaty would be observed.

This position of Japan and the attitude generally maintained by the neutral Powers seems to make it certain that the war must go on until the Russian Government has recovered from its present disorganized condition or become so hopelessly unable to rule its people that international intervention would be regarded as necessary.

In connection with these important dislosures it was explained to-day that Japan might be induced to consider peace overtures from Russia immediately if any or several of the strong pations of world would furnish guarantees that Russia would be compelled to live up to obligations contracted toward Japan in a final peace compact. However, there is arrived at Vladivostok with four officers; little likelihood that the neutral Powers will come to any agreement to offer such guarantees until every effort to secure an adjustment of the differences between the warring nations has proved futile.

HESITATE TO MAKE FIRST MOVE. The British Government, it is learned has already determined not to take any initiative in attempting to bring about peace. Its reason for this important decision is that a peace move on its part would immediately subject it to suspicion on account of its known friendliness to Japan and the existence of the defensive alliance between the Governments at London and Germany, it is understood, would hesitate to make openly the first move for peace, because she is of the opinion that the initiative must not be taken by any European This attitude on the part of Germany was made known to the American Government early in the present war. Germany was apprehensive that if the hostilities between Russia and Japan were not confined by some definite, mutual agreement to a defined zone of Asiatic territory military operations Some St. Petersburg information to the might be extended throughout the whole of China, thus exciting the natives, leading to general disorder and furnishing the opportunity for the seizure by one or other of the belligerents of Chinese territory, in regard to the possession of which there had been no dispute between Russia and

> Anxious to prevent any such dangerous outcome of the war. Germany believed that the friendly offices of some neutral power were necessary, but she believed also that for herself or any other European nation to take the initiative would in all probability excite the suspicion of one or perhaps both of the belligerents, and also of the neutral nations concerned in the Chinese question: For that reason Emperor William asked President Roosevelt to suggest to Russia and Japan that the area of hostilities be limited. Germany did not appear officially in the matter at all.

THINK WE SHOULD LEAD It is the understanding here that Germany is not the only nation interested which believes that the United States Government is better situated than any other to make suggestions which the Powers may deem necessary toward effecting peace. At writing the prevailing opinin diplomatic quarters Washington is that the United States should play the most important part among the neutrals in seeking to secure a settlement between Russia and Japan and that Washington is the proper place for the negotiation of the treaty of peace.
